MONTHLY COMMENTARY

On the back of further signs that global growth is slowing, central bankers around the world turned more dovish. The US Federal Reserve is not expected to raise official interest rates this year and is only expected to resume normalising its balance sheet in the second half of the year. The European Central Bank has also indicated that it will keep interest rates at historically low levels and is prepared to provide further stimulus if the ongoing trade war between the US and China continue to negatively impact Europe's manufacturing sector.

Despite the promise of easier monetary conditions throughout 2019, global bond yields inched higher during February. The market appears increasingly confident that the US and China will resolve their current trade impasse and sign a deal that removes most, if not all, of the additional tariffs introduced during 2018. The tariffs that were to be introduced at the beginning of March have been delayed given the progress made in trade talks between the two countries.

Global equity markets continued to post strong gains in February on the back of stronger earnings and more accommodative global monetary policy. The S&P 500 Index gained a further 3.2% during the month and is now up 11.5% in 2019. Although still off the highs registered in August and September last year, US equity markets have now recouped all the losses suffered in November and December last year.

In South Africa, the 2019 Budget tabled in parliament by Finance Minister, Tito Mboweni, has probably done enough to maintain South Africa's investment grade sovereign credit rating at Moody's, although the outlook might be downgraded to negative (from neutral) in light of the assistance being provided to Eskom over the next three years and the magnitude of the resulting budget deficit, which widens to 4.5% of GDP in 2019/20. Although there were no obvious tax hikes, the personal income tax tables were not adjusted for inflation, resulting in an additional R12.8 billion tax revenue through fiscal drag. South African long bond yields drifted higher following the tabling of the Budget and in sympathy with global markets.

Foreign investors have sold South African equities in record quantities in the first few months of 2019, according to data tracked by Bloomberg since 1999. This has placed significant pressure on the prices of domestically-focused sectors like retailers and banks. The overall market has been boosted by the strong gains in the resources sector, as well as a recovery in the price of Naspers, which benefited from the rally in technology stocks. Since the start of the year, the FTSE/JSE All Share Index has gained 6.3%, while the resources sector is up 12.6%.

South Africa's listed property sector gave back most of January's gains during February after Moody's downgraded Hyprop's credit rating to below investment grade, citing an increase in the look-through debt-to-asset value of 41%, because of debt funded acquisitions in Eastern Europe. Several companies, including Resilient and Fortress, released results that were below market expectations, placing further downward pressure on the sector in February. Delta Property Fund's share price tumbled 40% as the National Department of Public Works continues to delay the signing of more than 2,500 national government leases that have expired in the last three years.

The Bridge Stable Growth Fund declined by 2.5% in February. The Fund continues to allocate 40% of the portfolio to high quality businesses that are expected to deliver double-digit earnings growth over the medium and long term and reward shareholders with above-average dividend yields. The Fund also allocates 25% of the portfolio to listed property companies that offer the highest possible combination of income yield and income growth, while at the same time providing an acceptable level of property and geographic diversification.

TC are a necessary cost in administering the portfolio or CIS and impacts returns. It should not be considered in isolation as returns may be impacted by many other factors over time including market returns, the type of portfolio or CIS, the investment decisions of the investment manager and the TER. Total investment charges is a measure of the total value of portfolio incurred as costs relating to the investment of the portfolio or CIS. A higher TER / TC does not necessarily imply a poor return, nor does a low TER / TC imply a good return. The current TER may not necessarily be an accurate indication of future TER / TC's.
