The Old Mutual Investors' Fund lagged its benchmark for the quarter and 12 months to the end of March 2024.

Global risk assets continued their march upwards in the first quarter of 2024. While the rally has broadened, US and technology shares maintained their leadership. Nascent signs of improving activity, a good results season and improving financial conditions helped equity markets shrug off concerns around the stickiness of inflation. Oil prices rose, up 14% for the quarter, presenting a challenge to the pace of disinflation over the remainder of the year. The combination was unhelpful for global bonds, with the US 10-year Treasury yield rising by 30 basis points (bps) over the quarter. This resulted in global equities delivering 8% for the quarter, while global bonds were down 3% (both in US dollars).

Moderate rand weakness and poor domestic performance meant South African assets again lagged their global counterparts. Stagnant growth in China remained unhelpful, while domestic earnings were impacted by the myriad of electricity and logistics challenges, as well as a tough environment for consumers. Domestic bond yields continued to grind higher, ending the quarter back above 12%. This was despite a reasonable National Budget in February, as foreign investors remained absent while the asset class is well owned by local fund managers. The net result was similar outcomes for South African bonds and equities, both down by 2% to 3% over the quarter in rands. Domestic property was a relatively bright spot. Having bottomed in the last quarter of 2024, the sector continued to rerate from depressed levels, ending the quarter up 4%.

The fund remains defensively positioned in a high interest rate environment where the future direction of equity markets is primarily dependent on the timing of interest rate cuts. The Old Mutual Investor's Fund has holdings in most of the quarter's top performing shares and sectors including gold miners, Capitec, Mr Price, Aspen and Richemont. After an extended period of disappointment British American Tobacco also delivered a strong contribution to the fund. The portfolio has been underweight to MTN for some time and has avoided much of the company's recent currency driven weakness. These positive attributions were outweighed by poor performance from the big four banking shares, which were negatively impacted by rising bond yields. Sasol was another detractor from performance as financial and operational concerns weighed on the share. Late in the quarter, the rising oil price spurred a bounce in the Sasol price, which has continued into the current month.

The fund has benefited in absolute terms from its holdings in gold miners but is slightly underweight to the index weighting. We believe that the anticipated interest rate cuts in the US will potentially result in a weaker US dollar, a combination that has historically been positive for the gold price. Over the long term, gold mining companies have been a poor investment, so we are cautious about being overweight to such a volatile sector.

The Old Mutual Investors' Fund continues to tilt away from local defensive sectors towards interest rate sensitive shares. Markets are likely to remain wary ahead of the local elections but easing interest rates later in the year should provide a boost to consumer confidence. The fund remains underweight to resources shares, a view that has supported performance over the past three years and is dependent on our outlook for the Chinese economy.

While the start to the year has been disappointing, we have been gratified to see a number of our stock picks, including Aspen, MrPrice and Reunert, perform strongly in a tough domestic environment. This has provided some confidence that we are on the right track. Looking forward, we anticipate that investors will be guarded in the run-up to the election, before we can look forward to easier monetary policy later in the year. Global markets will stay on edge as the timing of rate cuts drives sentiment.

TER is a historic measure of the impact the deduction of management and operating costs has on a fund's value. A higher TER does not necessarily imply a poor return, nor does a low TER imply a good return. The current TER, which includes the annual service fee, may not necessarily be an accurate indication of future TERs. Transaction Cost (TC) is a necessary cost in administering the fund and impacts fund returns. It should not be considered in isolation as returns may be impacted by many other factors over time including market returns, the type of fund, the investment decisions of the investment manager and the TER.
